The following detailed account of the loss of he steamer Lieut. General Kroesen, is trupslated from the Batavia Bagblad of the 26th nitimo :-"On Saturday evening, there was apread abroad the terrible news of the loss of the N. I. S. N. Company's steamer Lieut. General Krossen which was on her voyage hither from Acheen, on Saturday, at the same time by the Managers grey, comes to the following: -On Wednesday observation was repeated at 7 o'clock. Saarran was then a front to E.N.E., and, with an eye to n westerly current which was perceptible, the captain bad repeatedly suffered the vessel to keep a little to the castward for the sake of once at 8 o'clock, the vessel, which was going at 8 German miles, struck suddenly and violently upon a reef. At that moment the captain was bastened above, where he beloed to carry out the order immediately to put the belm hard to arboard, which measure was ineffective because the vessel appeared to be immovably fixed. The thereupon following order to move the vessel backwards at full pressure of steam appeared equally fruitless. The motion of the ngino was powerless to bring the wosed away from ber position, and a moment afterwards the first engineer reported that the water was streaming into the ongine room is such quantities that the engine could no langer be used There were lifteen first class, and eight secondclass passengers on board, of whom probably several contlemen immediately repaired on deck, while the ladies and others awaited further information in the cabin. Who could have suspected, that even at the worst supposition, the destruction of the ship would follow so frightfully fast! The vessel was immovably fixed on a rock which had made a great leak amidships. Hence there was no time to be lost n abandoning the vessel as soon as possible.

Under supervision of their respective mates the boats were loosened and cut adrift, the first mate directed the letting down of one boat, in which he was to take, seat with the ship's papers and the mail bags. But during the letting down of this boat, which appeared to be the first amount be asked, although it was rather high, for London with her original carge of tea. One all this was going on, this Berlin note was to be upon him the better. The worst had happened. The after portion of the vessel. which had been merely kept up by water, having been made heavier by water streaming in, had been broken off, and had sunk with all those on it. At one time the captain hoped that the fore portion of the ship would now remain fixed on the rock, but scarcely had the after portion broken off and ennk. when the fore portion inclined forwards and sunk at this last momentnot more than a quarter of an boar having elapsed since the stoamboat struck-the captain jumps overboard, lays bold of a piece of wood, finds himself floating and swimming in the midet after baving, balf-confused, for 24 hours kept against the furious attacks of drowning natives who disputed with him the possession of his piece of wood, he was asved by one of the bosts, which had also picked up the first engineer. At that moment nothing more of the vessel was to be seen. So far as could be perceived, no more living beings were present at the scene of the calamity excepting those in the boats, and as it was unadvisable to stay longer amongst the flusting pieces of wreck because the boats were overgrowded, an endeavour was made to land on Jusaran Island, but it was soon perceived that this was impossible, owing to the heavy surf. On the following morning at 6 o'clock. Pulo Tegal was approached, but there also landing could not be risked. Thus there was nothing when to do than to seek the harbour of Telok Thursday the 22nd, almost at the same time as another boat which had on board the second mate, and which had also fruitlessly atrempted a landing on one of the relands. UNPUBLISHED TELEGRAMS. ST. PETERSBURG. June 19th. The Czar-has accepted an invitation from Emperor Francis Joseph to visit him at Reichat di on the 24th instant.

LONDON. June 20th. Telegrama from Constantinople report a disagreement amongst the Turkish Ministers upon the subject of the creation of a National Assembly. changes is considered probable. Ayr. June 20th.

A large cornet factory in this town was desperished in the flames. Washington, Jone 21st.

President Grant, in his message to Congress considers that the attitude of England in the ones of the forger Winslow abrogates the. extradition clause of the treaty of 1842. therefore, pending the decision of Congress, has declined the proposal made by England to modify the same conformably to an Act of Parliament, and noless England changes ber views, he will abstain from asking for or grunting extradition.

Lonnon, June 22ud. There is no fresh news from Turkey regarding the reported disagreement amongst Ministers. The Times, this morning, has an article on the subject; it considers that the first element for success; namely, national spirit, is wanting in Midhat's reform schemes. H. M. S. Boris is in quarantine in Simon's several of the crew have died from the disease. Further papers relating to the disturbances in Perak have been placed before Parliament. In a despatch of Lord Carnarvon to S'r William Jervois date June 1st, his lordship announces his final resolution to revert to the original intention of an Imperial Government, remarking that British Residents, who are to be purely advisors, will be supported by an armed force of native police. Lord Salisbury has introduced a Bill into Parliament subjecting to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Bombay the subjects of native Indian Princes who are found guilty of trading in slaves. LONDON, June 23rd. In the House of Commone last night, Mr. Disrauli, in promising to discuss Eastern Affaira before the recess, took occasion to explain that the Great Powers, though differing on other points, were unanimous in giving the Sultan ime for deciding on the best convec to pursue. There was no formal evidence as to how the insurgents had received an amnesty, or as to how the suspension of arms had been brought. allout, because, without any recognized head, the fact that Nicksich had been revictualled without opposition showed that there was some innate sympathy on the part of the Sultan for conferring with the various bodies on other subject (P) -Straits Times Extra.

GERMANY AND ENGLAND.

The Empress Augusta must have a very pleasant recollection of her visit to this country. She was everywhere received with marked courtesy, and nothing could have been more hearty than the cheere of the orowd which assembled to see her start-from Dover. The Germans are much gratified at these proofs of good will; and, on the whole; the visit and the spirit in which it has been regarded may be taken as an indication that a kindly feeling is apringing up between the two peoples. For some time after the late war there was some bitterness on both sides. Many Englishmen thought the conquerors had treated the conquered with unnecessary burshness; and, on the other hand, the Germans were indignant at what they considered our partiality towards the French. Time has softened all these asperities, and now more cordial relations are evidently about to be established. Prince Bismarck bas, indeed, gone out of his way several times of late to show politeness to Great Britain. His congratulations of the Sacz Oarsl purchase were exceptionally warm; and known that he had the most absolute confidence in our tribunals. When the Imperial Chancellor displays a strong feeling of this sort we may be quite sure that he is in harmony with the essential tendencina of the majority of his nation. Tue truth is, Germans orenot beloseeing that, of all countries in the world, England is their most natural friend. There lies deep in the German mind a suspicion of Russian designs-a suspicion which is the result partly of deliberate reflection, partly, and perhaps still | Goods stored therein, at Current Local Rates, more, of inherited dislike. Now all the world knowe that, whether we have really anything -to-fear-from Russia or not, it is the country against which we feel we have most reason to be on our guard. This circumstance alone would tend to draw Germany and England together; but, besides, they cannot forget that they have never been open enemies, that they have often shared common triumphs, and that each has powerfully contributed to the intellec-

THE MODERN MISSION OF WHIST The last phase in the already eventful life of this most business-like of games is one little anticipated by its founders or early patrons. Short whist was invented while Crockford's was at the height of its vogue, and at a time when hundreds, and sometimes cried, "One moment! I lay you a Napoleon thousands, of points were still chanced on a he hadn't a trump!" thousands, of pounds were still chanced on a game of backgammon or piquet. Although from the dark ages of long whist-nay, for sught we know, from the semi-barbarous period of whisk-and-swabbers-the game was often played for heavy stakes, it was reserved for these latter times to behold it take its stand as the only vehicle in England for ex-

But in soher earnest, perhaps the strongest reason for anticipating an ever-growing popularity for the game is that no other can so ustly take far its own that hackneyed Latin motto, so dear to the English heart. "Palmam qui moruit ferat," for there can be no doubt that in the long run the best players are the winners; despite the startling, though undeniable fact which nothing but very life-long observation would convince one, that there are here and there men who seem to be constitutionally, and therefore for life, good or had card holders, and these mysterious qualities are sometimes in direct inverse ratio to the morits of the individual as a player. But those are, after all, only the exceptions which prove the rule, and in fully nineteen cases out of twenty the man who is loudest in grumbling at his cards has really nothing to blame but his own deficioncies. Let our parting glance at this great pasteboard edifice be east upon a lighter side than the groans of the discontented. We allude to the amusing, and sometimes unconscious, degree to which a whist fanatico often carries his absorption in the game.

Four Frenchmen had played together daily for some twenty years, and were supposed by the world-who, when for a change it takes to thinking well of people, is generally wrong-to be much attached to one another. A day arrived when one of these dear friends fell back in an apoplectic fit, his cards remaining face downwards on the table as they dropped from his hand. The right hand antagonist was bastening to raise him, when he was seized by the stricken man's partner, who, having glanced at his own hand,

He had no trump. lady who, after spending the greater part of her days and nights during most of her life at the whist-table, suddenly bothought her one Saturday that it wight beas well to mention the little fact to her director. "Well, well," replied the good man, "you tell me your stakes are moderate, so it can only be a question of loss of time." "Loss of time!" exclaimed the lady aghast at his profanity. "Loss of time! Ah! to be sure, I see now. . One does lose a lot of time in shuffling !" Shall we add to these foreign justances the fact that Christian gentlemen in England involutely discovered that six days a week
